What is Philosophy?

The word “philosophy” is from Greek and means “love of wisdom”. Philosophy examines the grounds for fundamental beliefs and analyzes the basic concepts employed in the expression of such beliefs. That is, philosophy is a domain of study of the ultimate reality, causes, and principles underlying our being and thinking. Philosophy falls into three major branches: Epistemology, Ontology, and Theory of value (ethics and aesthetics). Epistemology investigates the nature of knowledge and the process of knowing. Ontology (Metaphysics) inquires into the existence and existential nature of everything in the universe. Ethics deals with the problem of right conduct and aesthetic attempts to determine the nature of beauty and the criteria of artistic judgement. The Eastern world is another source of philosophical thoughts. Most eastern philosophy was founded on religious ideas and contains rigorously developed systems. Buddhism, Confucianism, Hinduism, Taoism, Jainism are representative eastern thoughts of philosophy. Though there are differences between eastern and western philosophy, both commonly explore the essential and fundamental areas of all knowledge. As such, philosophy is referred to as the “science of science” or “studies not for knowledge, but for knowledge itself”.

Philosophy at Kyung Hee

The Department of Philosophy was founded in 1979, under the name of National Ethics. The name was changed to Department of Philosophy in 1987. The department has 11 faculty members, roughly 160 undergraduate students, and about 20 graduate students.

The Department offers programs of study leading to the degrees of Doctor of Philosophy, Master of Arts, and Bachelor of Arts. The programs emphasize contemporary philosophy, metaphysics, ethics, history of philosophy, Buddhism, and Confucian philosophy. The program leading to the Bachelor of Arts emphasizes training for the fundamentals of scholarly research and teaching.

The great advantage of the Department of Philosophy is that it offers academic excellence on a personal scale. Although the Department is still young and relatively small, intellectual life within the Department can be both intimate and challenging. At the same time, it is possible - and in fact quite common - for students to reach out to other disciplines for scholarly growth. In sum, it is a department that spans the universe of knowledge yet provides a wealth of opportunities for individual achievement and recognition.

Seminars and colloquia on various issues and topics are scheduled regularly, consisting of talks by visiting and resident philosophers and other humanists. These constitute an important component of the student educational program.

The Department awards various types of fellowships and scholarships to help students meet the cost of education. These awards are intended to further the recipients’ education and recipients are expected to devote full time to their studies and to any required research and training.

Careers and Graduate Destinations

There are many routes for graduates of our department. Many students choose to enter the education field as instructors in middle or high schools. Others occupy philosophy-related realms, such as communication areas and publishing circles. Most students get jobs in companies of various fields and have active careers. Some graduates go on to the next stage of education and pursue master's or Ph.D. degrees of philosophy at various universities. Other students choose another field of graduate course, such as sociology, politics, theology, economics, and literature. Our department offers students a strong program of developing requisite abilities such as critical thinking, language ability, and personality, to become an excellent agent in society.
