2006 Peace BAR Festival

In Celebration of the 25th Anniversary of the UN International Day of Peace

Objective

From 'Exclusive' to 'Inclusive' Universality

Is there really such a thing as humanity? Has there ever been an age of humanity? Since the Renaissance, humans have conceived of themselves as the masters of the world, but the age of humanity has not been realized. 'Freedom and equality,' values held to be modern and universal, seem to be too often supplanted by an exclusive universality, which is used to dominate others. Conflict and anxiety abound in every part of the world, and their mechanisms are intrinsic to modern life. Indeed, modernity appears to cast a wide and deep shadow, and it is because of this that a new form of universality capable of embracing diversity is now needed more than ever.

The Global Academy for Neo-Renaissance of Kyung Hee University will hold 'the 2006 Peace Bar Festival' in celebration of the 25th UN International Day of Peace. Under the main theme of "Reinventing Universality for the 21st Century: Beyond Freedom and Equality," the Festival will provide an open forum to explore a new age of humanity for peace and co-prosperity in pursuit of inclusive universality - a global common society that is spiritually Beautiful, materially Affluent, and humanly Rewarding (BAR). A new humanity and a new Renaissance await. A new age of humanity working toward a new future lies ahead.

Theme Reinventing Universality for the 21st Century: Beyond Freedom and Equality

Objective During the Renaissance, when man conceived of himself as the master of the world, humankind began its continuing pursuit of humanistic ideals. Modern society has since directed itself toward the achievement of the universal values of freedom and equality. It has also witnessed the destructive power of the World Wars and the horrors of the Holocaust in the 20th century. In the post-Cold War era, a new left and a new right have emerged, both of which claim to seek a new and better future. However, waves of modernization and globalization have swept away the imagination of both non-Western and Western nations, creating gaps and clashes among differing nations and societies.

We stand at the head of a new century during which we must forge a future free of fixed and conflicting values. Therefore, our challenging task is to bring about a better and more prosperous civilization for the future by means of reconciling the divisive tendencies of humankind with the values of freedom and equality. Throughout this international conference celebrating the 25th UN International Day of Peace, "Reinventing Universality for the 21st Century: Beyond Freedom and Equality," we plan to search for new common meanings and values which will promote global trust. With this we hope to engender peace and co-prosperity in the 21st century.

Plenary Session I

Reinventing Humanity

10:40 - 12:10, Friday October 27, 2006 / Lotte Hotel Crystal Ballroom (Sogong-dong)

Since the Renaissance, modern society has given a more prominent status to humanity than to God. Humankind has subjugated nature to the human world through hard reason and resolute practices. However, the dignity and integrity of humanity will be strengthened by the sharing of tender feelings with and for others who are also standing in awe before the mysteries of the universe. Only by working together will humanity open up the possibilities for neo-Renaissance in the 21st century.

Plenary Session II

Beyond Freedom and Equality

13:30 - 15:00, Friday October 27, 2006 / Lotte Hotel Crystal Ballroom (Sogong-dong)

Modern society has made progress in social development and economic growth by exercising freedom and equality. However, our concept of freedom has fallen short of overcoming self-centeredness, and our application of equality has bordered on uniformity. As such, rather than liberating us, these values impose a heavy burden on humanity. We can open a new and better future by overcoming the limits faced by freedom and equality in the past. In this session, we will search for an alternative plan for a future that includes the gains of the welfare state and does not abandon the virtues of liberalism.

Moderator Hongwoo Kim (Professor, Seoul National University)

Presenter John Dunn (Professor, University of Cambridge, UK)

Discussants Renate Bloem (President, CONGO, Switzerland)

Yonghak Kim (Professor, Yonsei University)

Hyuk-Sang Sohn (Professor, Kyung Hee University)

Plenary Session III

Renaissance Revisited - A New Aesthetics of Universality

15:30 - 17:00, Friday October 27, 2006 / Lotte Hotel Crystal Ballroom (Sogong-dong)

In the last few centuries, the humanistic values that have shaped modern civilization have also given rise to numerous negative and boomerang effects by allowing humanity to misuse the natural world for its own benefits. The 21st century developments in artificial intelligence and biotechnology demand a radical new perspective concerning the relationship between humans and their artifacts on the one hand, and between humans and nature on the other. In this session, we wish to probe the possibilities of a new paradigm to develop the aesthetics of a new civilization in the age of multiculturalism.

- Moderator Hwa Yol Jung (Professor, Moravian College, USA)
Presenter Longxi Zhang (Professor, City University of Hong Kong, China)
Discussants Walter Reese-Schaefer (Professor, University of Gottingen, Germany)
 Dongsoo Lee (Professor, Kyung Hee University)

Special Session I (Roundtable)

Global Governance in the Post-Cold War Era

09:30 - 11:00, Saturday October 28, 2006 / Conference Room, University Main Building, KHU

State-led economic growth and political development in the modern age have provided humanity with a freedom and equality it had not previously enjoyed. However, the polarizing effects of the Cold War created dangerous tensions throughout the world in the 20th century. Now in the post-Cold War era, the prospect of a new world order is within our reach. In this roundtable, participants will examine problems of reconciling the rules and systems of the previous era with expectations of change. Participants will also discuss the possibilities of establishing a new regime of global governance in the 21st century.

- Moderator John G. Ikenberry (Professor, Princeton University, USA)
Keynote Speaker Takashi Inoguchi (Professor, Chuo University, Japan)
Discussion Leaders John Dunn (Professor, University of Cambridge, UK)
 Joan Kirby (Chair, NGO/DPI Executive Committee, USA)
 Walter Reese-Schaefer (Professor, University of Goettingen, Germany)
 Longxi Zhang (Professor, City University of Hong Kong, China)
 Jaeho Yeom (Professor, Korea University)

Special Session II (Roundtable)

Empowering Civic Virtue - The Role of Politics & Global Civil Society

11:10 - 12:40, Saturday October 28, 2006 / Conference Room, University Main Building, KHU

The emergence of civil society has been a worldwide phenomenon since the late 20th century. As a result, citizens discontented with contemporary politics centered on state authority have sought to become empowered as they actively participate in society. Leading the development of global civil society, such activism has led to the establishment of new relationships between multi-vision holders, individuals with varied and various visions of the future while promoting alternative modes of governance. In this roundtable, participants will consider the future progression of global civil society and explore the possibilities of holding the World Civic Forum.

2. 2006 Kyung Hee Youth Forum

Theme Global Governance in the 21st Century

Objective The 2006 Kyung Hee Youth Forum will offer an open forum for discussion of the universal values of humanity and their significance. Students, who will be the main actors in the coming era of global community, should internalize a global mindset surpassing the heritage of modernity. As leaders, they themselves will manifest new universal values. Under the theme, "Global Governance in the 21st Century," these future leaders will discuss their ideas about the future roles of the UN and NGOs in the globalization era and Northeast Asian governance. Through this forum, students will explore the rights and responsibilities that global governance may attain, and even require, in order to construct a new world order based, not on superpowers or transnational corporations but, on harmony between humans, between nations, and between humans and nature.

Date 10:00 - 17:00, Thursday October 26, 2006

Venue Cheongwoongwan, KHU Seoul Campus

3. The 2006 Sharing Festival: "One Fine Day"

|----------------|---|
| Objective | Neo-Renaissance humanity may be manifested through citizens' voluntary participation and sharing. With participation from local citizens, the festival will provide an opportunity to form networks between the local and the global communities by practicing sharing and charitable acts in everyday life. Organized jointly by the Global Academy for Neo-Renaissance and the Beautiful Foundation, "One Fine Day" is part of a new movement emphasizing acts of sharing and service for communities. Participants may designate one day each year as "My Fine Day," announce their plans for the day on the website, and report the results afterward. This movement is expected to present a new model for volunteer work and help spread a culture of service and sharing, thereby functioning as an arena for people to better understand the need for civil society in the 21 st century, or global community. |
| Date | 12:00 - 17:30, Saturday October 28, 2006 |
| Venue | Grand Peace Hall and Amphitheater, KHU Seoul Campus |
| Organizers | Global Academy for Neo-Renaissance, Beautiful Foundation, and Beautiful Store |
| Major Programs | Proclamation Ceremony for the "One Fine Day" Vision / Beautiful Sharing Market Kyung Hee Actions for Community Partnerships |

What is "One Fine Day"?

- Individuals or organizations designate one day, choose their plans for the day, and engage in volunteer work or donations on that day (one fine day of individuals or organizations).
- Individuals or organizations announce their action plans for One Fine Day on the One Fine Day website (www.onefineday.or.kr) and, upon conclusion of the day in question, report the results in one of various ways (reports, photographs, videos, and statements of prayer).
- Kyung Hee University and the Beautiful Foundation deploy the campaign at the national level in cooperation with civil society and, with the United Nations, further develop it into a campaign at the international level in order to realize the values and goals of the participating individuals and organizations.
- Kyung Hee University creates a new paradigm of social movement by working together with the government, private enterprise, civil society, and the mass media, and by continuously sponsoring programs and events throughout the year, such as the campaign for the "earth filled with happiness and good wishes for 365 days," ongoing volunteer work, everyday donations, and prayer activities.

Proclamation Ceremony for the "One Fine Day" Vision

This ceremony will provide the opportunity to examine the objectives and significance of "One Fine Day" and share its future plan and vision with 100 participants from various fields.
